The Flounder - Wikipedia

The title, Crabwalk, defined by Grass as "scuttling backward to move forward," refers to both the necessary reference to various events, some occurring at the same time, the same events that would lead to the eventual disaster. Crabwalk might also imply a more abstract backward glance at history, in order to allow a people to move forward. The protagonist's awkward relationships with his ...

Gunter Grass, The Flounder (Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, 1977) I just couldn't get through it. I can't really put my finger on why, but there it is. The Flounder contains all the things I revere about Grass-- a strong sense of history, scurrilous sense of humor, strong characters put into wonderfully unrealistic situations.

In 1936, Jesse Owens does play a role and there is also the German athlete, not Long, who Owens said could run a 9.8 100 meters. While I could stay at the Olympics for the entire book, Gunter Grass stays there in the tradition of the work and then is gone. In Germany, evidently 1941 was early enough for skepticism.
