Trading Up and trading down has a transformational effect on more and more categories, retailing and markets. Silverstein clearly explains that the increasingly sophisticated consumers of the critical "middle market" have been key to drive a polarization of the product and service offering to the high and low ends of the price spectrum.

Trading up is driven by changes to both demand and supply. On the demand side, changes to the role of women as economic agent, the decline of the traditional family, a modified perception of consumption, higher home ownership, more discretionary wealth, and the "savings" passed on to American households by large discount retailers have fuelled the stratospheric rise of the New Luxury market.
